BELL DISTRACTS
CLERKS NO LONGER

Auctioneer's Gong that Worried
Patent Office Employees, Is Stilled by Police.

No longer will the minds of the employees of the Patent Office be distracted by the jangling of the auctioneer's bell. For some time past numerous complaints have been made to Clement S. Ucker, Chief Clerk of the Department of the Interior, by employees of the Patent Office to the effect that their work was interfered with by the incessant ringing of a bell at an auctioneer's establishment in Seventh Street Northwest between K and P Streets, opposite the Patent Office.

The complaint that the bell commenced ringing promptly at 5 o'clock in the morning and that it continued until 4:30 o'clock.

Chief Clerk Ucker finally reported the matter to the police and an attempt was made to arrest the auctioneer on a charge of disorderly conduct. While the warrant was being sworn out in Police Court, however, Assistant Corporation Counsel Gus C. Schuldt considered the case and rendered a decision to the effect that the auctioneer was not liable to prosecution for the ringing of the bell.

The warrant was not sworn out, but Capt. Michael Byrnes, of the Sixth precinct, visited the auctioneer and explained to him how he was unnecessarily interfering with the work of Uncle Sam and slowly demolishing the Patent Office. Tears came to the eyes of the auctioneer at the thought of having caused Uncle Sam a moment's trouble, and in broken words notified the captain that it would be unnecessary to arrest him, for he would discontinue the ringing of the obnoxious bell at once.

So the bell will ring no more. That is, during Patent Office hours. But up to one minute of nine in the morning, and after 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon, the bell will continue to ring, and the auctioneer will jangle it in a manner never before heard of in order to make up for lost time.

TWELVE YEARS IN OFFICE.

James M. Lynch Again at Head of Typographical Union.

James M. Lynch was elected president of the International Typographical Union in 1900, having been the vice president for the two previous years. He had a schooling which admirably fitted him for the success which has attended his administration without interruption. In 1887, just when he had completed his apprenticeship, he became a member of Syracuse Typographical Union, No. 53, and since that time has been continuously a member in highest standing. He was successively recording secretary, vice president, and president, being elected president before he was twenty-two years of age. For seven years he was president of the Syracuse Trades Assembly.

These and other labors did Mr. Lynch perform for the perfection of the organization and the strengthening co-operation among all branches of the trade of the printer and its first cousins in allied trades, and it was a logical action of the printers by their referendum in 1900 that he should be placed at the head of affairs where a man of exactly his type was needed.

It is no exaggeration, and no word of disparagement to others, to say that the International Typographical Union has seen by far the most prosperous period of its existence since the advent of Mr. Lynch in the chair as president. This is not only an acknowledgment of his ability as an organizer, but is also due to his success in inspiring others with his own enthusiasm and energy, and with the highest spirit and aims of the organization.

As one of his friends who knows of all his efforts said of him the other day: "By unionizing an office here, gaining the friendship of a 'hostile' employer there, and piecing all together until hundreds of composing rooms were unionized, many of them representing the leading newspapers of the country that had not for years previously recognized the International Typographical Union; and he had the art and diplomacy to gain these many successive victories without engendering antagonism or leaving a bitter taste in the mouth of any one. Publishers 'came along' because Jim convinced them that such a course was pre-eminently for their own benefit as well as for the benefit of workers, which were really soldiers of their own army and fighting their battles."

Aside from his herculean labors and his accomplishments in the field of organization, Mr. Lynch gave his great abilities and energy to what may be termed more truly philanthropic effort. Through him more than by the impulse of any other the Home for Union Printers at Colorado Springs was "built up from a picture to a reality," as one old printer epigrammatically expresses it; he brought about the establishment of the old-age pension fund, and through his suggestion the technical education commission was appointed, and is in successful operation; he took every opportunity to urge the mortuary fund until it became a law; he has been a consistent and militant champion of arbitration of differences, and his policy has resulted in many unions gaining its point without resorting to a strike, the issue of which might have been doubtful.

It is conceded by printers and publishers alike that under the administration of James M. Lynch the International Typographical Union has come to be recognized as the strongest, the most wisely conducted, the most progressive and successful international trades union on the continent.

INDICTMENT IS DISMISSED.

Charges Against Three Men Quashed
by District Attorney.

The indictment against Lawrence E. Dodge, Stephen C. Weaver, and Herbert C. Hopkins has been dismissed by United States District Attorney Clarence H. Wilson. The indictment charged the trio with conspiring to defraud Dr. Thomas V. Hammond out of the security for a $4,000 note held by him.

According to the indictment, the security in question was conveyed by Dodge, Weaver, and Hopkins, then one of the trustees, resigned rather than sign the release of the trust without first seeing the canceled note. The charged conspiracy was then vented in Ira W. Hopkins, who was persuaded by the trio to execute a release of the trust, thereby completing the conspiracy, with which they were charged. The two trustees, one for $500 and the other for $5,000, were placed on the property involved in the transaction.
